

Scott Bruce

Report Report

To help me write the Field report I first did some research on the different fields and talked to Dad about what he thought. I made an outline of three fields with three to five bullet points talking about different basic definitions or descriptions as well as a few examples of the field use. For the second paragraph, I had done basically the same thing except I had made points about what people working in those fields do and how it relates back to the basic description of computer science I had given earlier. Although when writing about these fields I didn't get to every point I tried to hit 2-3 minimum before moving on to the next field. This helped me keep it concise and not ramble on for too long about different topics. Afterward, I went through the report and made sure the information I had previously found has applied correctly and I didn't make any mistakes in the information I gave. As well as making sure the report achieved the goal of explaining the different fields and kept my parents in touch with the different career paths I have been exploring all this time. Finally, to help check for spelling and grammar mistakes I used Grammarly as recommended by my professor. Although I always use Grammarly because it is a fantastic program for checking these common mistakes.